PAYING THEIR DEBTS

The manner in which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is proceeding to get the European nations to pay their war indebtedness to this country is commendable. The foreign countries that found ready aid during the late war in getting money from this government should have placed them under obligation to make immediate settlement or at least make effort to that effect without being forced.

Secretary Mellon has been diplomatic and his efforts are being repaid in these nations formulating a plan to reimburse this country. Some time ago Great Britain started repayment. France has now put in motion governmental machinery to collect taxes to repay. Belgium has completed her arrangements. Now Italy falls into line and wants to open negotiations as to making a settlement. For all this Secretary Mellon must have credit of closing these accounts with nations who know that money was lent them without any legal document being drawn up during the stress of the war time period.

DON'T FRET

During the times of financial fluxity and the above caption, an exchange tells the mark by saying that a man's business life is too short to waste any trifling matter of business.

If a man has a mind to be annoyed by every little mishap that occurs in his establishment he can keep himself in constant hot water by worrying. There is neither sense nor reason in lying into a fit of passion because a careless clerk breaks a fixture, or commits some other trifling blunder. Constant fretting on the part of employers makes clerks nervous, and in this condition of mind and body they are far more apt to make mistakes than they otherwise would be. Business worry wears a man out rapidly, and when the habit of fussing is once acquired, it is extremely difficult to rid one's self of it. There are men who work themselves into a perfect fit of passion over little insignificant matters not worthy of serious thought and consideration. There are other men who fret because they fear something unpleasant is going to happen to their business career; they may have obligations to meet, a bill due at the bank, while their customers can not be depended upon to help them out of a tight corner, but there is no earthly use in borrowing trouble until trouble comes, and then every enterprising merchant should manfully meet it.

There is a great difference in merchants. Some wear themselves out before middle life, become irritable, suspicious and disagreeable in the conduct of a very small business, while other men, with vast interests and great responsibilities, who are calm and well poised, patient and nervy, live to a good old age without borrowing trouble or shattering their nerves over trifles.

ELECTRICITY IN HOMES

We were surprised some days ago in reading the report of the electric companies in Ohio as required by a public commission. More than one million homes in Ohio have electric lights and power, to say nothing of the hundreds of thousands of homes on farms that use the modern farm lighting plants.

When we think of the conveniences that electricity can be put to in the homes what a great satisfaction and pleasure it is to all these housewives that they can wash, iron, cook, sew, cool the ice box, and relieve them of older back breaking methods that only wore out the housewife. This is all in addition to the advantages of light for the home that is the most satisfactory yet known.

There are 222 electric light companies in this state and 11 of them serve more than 80 per cent of the people. It is interesting to know that the Dayton Light & Power Company has 66,669 consumers, both homes and industrial and commercial establishments using their product.

In the near all of these companies are furnishing their patrons a splendid service at a fair rate. This is especially so with the Dayton company.

Very frequently public utility companies loose sight of the fact that the patron must be given something more than a bill at the end of each month. The public stands ready today a just price for all it receives if the service warrants it. The Dayton company has always been fair to think. It has not resorted to underhanded methods to force exorbitant rates on the public. The rate question was always presented in a business like manner and the company has prospered by it. While the Dayton concern just recently went under new ownership, we predict the same support in the future from the public, considering that unreasonable requests are not made. It is very unfortunate that the same cannot be said of the gas companies the past few years. There has been a tendency to force high rates and at the same time reduce the service. When that happens the public retels and the gas companies are fighting for everything they get by fair or foul means. They may get the higher rates and reduce the service but they cannot get the good will of their patrons—and in the end that must be their success.

THE MOSQUITO PROBLEM

What to do with the mosquito problem is not only a perplexing question locally but in many other places, some larger, some smaller.

There can no one agency be charged with being responsible for this pest in this community. The entire village is at fault in some respects in that no means has been taken as a preventative. There are sewers about town that are like bee-hives and the best breeding places. The condition of the creek demands a cleaning out process that there will be a continual flow of water. This will be an expense of no little amount and where is the money to come from to do the work?

Several days ago while driving across the state of Indiana, we had occasion to stop in one county seat city. To our surprise nearly every window about the business section had some advertising display for mosquito dops. This small city has no paper mill so the epidemic there could not be laid to that.

In discussing the mosquito problem some days ago with a scientist, one at least well educated along that line, we find that the mosquito even has the scientists guessing. We were told it was a form of evolution from the "wiggly-tail". That it did not travel but a short distance from where it was hatched. There are various kinds of mosquitoes and all agree that damp, foul places are the breeding places.

In as much as we have no authority on how to handle the problem it might be well to turn it over to the evolution and anti-evolution forces and get a decision after William Jennings Bryan and Clarence Darrow debate the cause, effect and cure.

AUTOS AND PHONES

The most commonplace things are seldom given much consideration. In comparing the telephone with the automobile one would not think that more people regard the automobile as a necessity than a telephone.

Such is the case and two million more automobiles are in use in this country than telephones. Both are commonplace necessities today. We now have 17,740,236 automobiles and 15,369,454 telephones in use in this country.

The world moves fast, but never so fast as when mechanical power is applied to it.

VANDERVOORT SUED

Mrs. Emory McCright, Wilmington, administratrix of the estate of her husband, Emory McCright, has brought suit in the local county courts against Louis Vandervoort, for $25,000, claiming that she and the two children had been deprived of the husband and father's support. The husband was a policeman in Wilmington and that he died as a result of a gun shot wound inflicted by young Vandervoort, according to the petition. Vandervoort is now in the penitentiary having plead guilty to second degree murder. A similar suit was brought in this county by the widow of Eyras Matthews, the latter a policeman who was shot in Xenia. The suit was compromised out of court. Vandervoort is from a prominent wealthy family and when arrested had much stolen property about his home that had been taken from stores in Greene and Clinton counties.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

Sunday School Lesson

REPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL
Lesson for July 12
THE GOSPEL IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:13-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people."—Ezekiel 3:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Strangers About Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Barnabas and Paul in Antioch, Pisidia.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Early Victories of Foreign Missions.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul's Preaching and Its Effects.

1. In the Synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia (vv. 13-16).
From Ephesus Paul and Barnabas, with their companion Mark, went northward to Perga. Here Mark, for some reason, perhaps because of hardships, went back. He was ready to go again when they started on their second journey, but Paul would not give his consent (Acts 15:38-39). Before Paul's death he testified in Mark's favor for he had found him profitable unto him for the ministry (II Tim. 4:11). From Perga they went to Antioch in Pisidia, and here they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath day. From this we see that though Paul was sent to the Gentiles, he did not depart from the order of beginning with the Jews.

2. Paul's First Recorded Sermon (vv. 17-23).
This sermon is worthy of careful study. In its analysis we find four parts:

- (1) Historical (vv. 17-23).
In this section we see how Paul, in a missionary way, led them gradually through a series of changes in which God had dealt graciously with them, finally giving them Jesus, His Son.
- (2) God chose and exalted the people (v. 17).
- (3) He delivered them from Egyptian bondage, and led them through the terrible wilderness (vv. 17-18).
- (4) He destroyed the Canaanish nations, giving them lands to the Israelites (v. 19).
- (5) He gave them judges as their deliverers when distressed by surrounding nations (v. 20).
- (6) After they had selfishly chosen a king, He rejected the dynasty of Saul and chose David, a man after His own heart (v. 21-22).
- (7) Finally, it was God who from David's seed raised up unto Israel a Savior, Jesus. This demanded proof, which is given in the next section.

3. Apologetical (vv. 24-27).
That this Jesus is the seed of David and therefore the promised Messiah, he proves by three lines of argument:

- (1) The testimony of John the Baptist (vv. 24-25).
John disclaimed all power as their deliverer, and pointed to Jesus as such.
- (2) The prophecies of Scripture were fulfilled in their rejection and crucifixion of Jesus (v. 26-27).
- (3) By His resurrection from the dead (vv. 30-37).

Having proved Jesus to be the seed of David, he proceeds to follow the doctrinal teachings growing out of such proof.

4. Doctrinal (vv. 38-52).
The great doctrine derived from this proof is justification by faith, the very marrow of the gospel.

(1) The ground of justification is by Jesus. He took our place as a sinner that we might have His place as sons (II Cor. 5:21).

(2) Who are justified? Those who believe in Him.

(3) From what is one justified? All sins. The one who believes in Jesus is freely forgiven. His sins are all blotted out. This is the missionary message for all times. May we strive to get our pupils to believe on Him.

(4) Practical (vv. 40-41).
The application of this sermon was a warning lest the Gentiles spoken of by Habakkuk should fall upon them.

III. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 42-52).
1. Many of the Jews and proselytes asked to hear these words again (vv. 42-43).

Almost the whole city came to hear the Word of God the next Sabbath. This great crowd incited the jealousy of the Jews.

2. Open Opposition (vv. 50-52).
This jealousy could not long be restrained. It broke out in open opposition. The persecution became so violent that Paul and Barnabas were expelled from the city. This persecution was answered by Paul's rejection of the Jews and his turning to the Gentiles.

3. The disciples were filled with joy and the Holy Ghost (v. 52).

Jean Paul Richter said:
"The life of Christ concerns Him, who being the holiest among the mighty, and the mightiest among the holy, lifted with His pierced hands empires off their hinges, and turned the stream of centuries out of its channel, and still governs the ages."

God Must Lead
Water is the greatest necessity of life, though God must lead us into the wilderness before we understand it.—Evangelical Teacher.

The Post's Conditions
Wherever snow falls or water flows or birds fly, wherever day and night meet in twilight, wherever the blue heaven is hung by clouds or sown with stars, wherever are forms with transparent boundaries, wherever are outlets into celestial space, there is beauty, wherever is life, and for thee, and though thou shouldst walk the world over, thou shalt not be able to find a condition importunate or ignoble.—Emerson.

Those Artful Dodgers

By H. IRVING KING

"ONE thing is certain," said Mrs. Varnum Foster to her daughter Mary—age twenty-one, and very fair to look upon—"you shall not marry Amos Fisher."

Mary had been having a heart-to-heart talk with Mary on the subject of matrimony, and had strongly intimated that it was about time the young lady considered the subject in a serious and practical light. The fond mother had missed several eligible young men, any one of whom she would willingly receive as a son-in-law, and Mary had replied to every suggestion with some such flippant remark as "Nonsense!" "Pooh!" or "He's horrid!" Then the irritated mother issued her decree of prohibition against Amos Fisher.

Mary "sat up and took notes" at this. She had no idea of marrying Amos until her mother put the idea into her head. But now she came to think of it, Amos would not make such a bad husband—if she really had such an embarrassment. She and Amos had been good friends for years—in fact, were quite "chummy"—but in all her dreams of the future Mary had never pictured Fisher as leading her to the altar.

"Why, what's the matter with Amos?" asked Mary.

"Everything is the matter with him," replied the mother. "He hasn't any money, or any prospects."

"Oh, yes, he has," cried Mary. "He has a bank account—he told me so—and he is going to be taken into partnership by the firm he works for next fall—he told me so."

"He told you so!" scoffed Mrs. Foster. "And I suppose you believe everything he tells you. Well, your father and I have talked it over, and you shall not marry Amos Fisher."

What could you expect after that? But one thing, Mary resolved that she would marry Amos Fisher if she had to do the proposing herself. The nebulous creature of her fancy whom she had seen in her day-dreams leading her to the altar now assumed the form and features of Amos Fisher.

And then she thought, "Goodness gracious! Have I been in love with Amos all along and not realized it?"

Mrs. Foster had been wrong when she scoffed at Amos Fisher's prospects. What he had told Mary about his bank account and his being taken into partnership was true; and besides, his father, Thomas Fisher, was a rather successful business person—quite as flourishing as Mary's father, John Foster, anyway. But, like most mothers with pretty daughters, Mrs. Foster had resolved that Mary should make a brilliant match.

About the time that Mrs. Foster was delivering her allocution to Mary, Tom Fisher was in his private office holding forth to his son on the same subject and in a like strain.

"Amos," said he, "it is about time you got married. You are now twenty-six. I was married when I was twenty-one. I have noticed you going about a good deal with that Foster girl. Nice girl enough, but no wife for you. With your good looks, your education and your prospects, you ought to marry somebody who will be a help to you. Now cut out Mary Foster and look about for some nice girl with money."

"Why, father," replied the astonished Amos, "Mary and I have been chums since we were children. But as for marrying her, I never—"

Then he stopped suddenly. He turned pale and then red, and gave a little gasp. He seemed to be struggling with some sudden emotion, some sudden conviction. A new heaven and a new earth seemed all at once presented to him. "Father," said he firmly, "I have never disobeyed you before in my life. But this time I must do so. I shall ask Mary Foster to be my wife the first time I see her—and I will see her this very night!"

He went out of the office before his father could get in another word, with head erect and a look of determination on his face. But in his eyes was a new light—the love-light which had been long smoldering there, and had now, by the words of his father, been kindled into a flame. That evening he called upon Mary. Amos was the first to regain his self-control, and he plunged into the matter at hand at once.

"Mary," said he, "I have been in love with you for a long time and have just found it out. Will you marry me?"

"Yes, Amos," replied Mary, "but mother said I mustn't."

"Father said I mustn't," replied Amos, "but I am going to."

The next day Tom Fisher and John Foster met on the street and shook hands cordially.

"Come out just as we had planned, didn't it, Tom?" said Foster, "but don't you ever tell my wife that I worked her for a cat's paw—she'd skin me alive. She's mad as a hatter now with Mary; but she'll get over it."

"Two clever old guys, we two, ain't we, Jack?" replied Foster, and quoted: "He was warned against the woman; she was warned against the man; and if that don't make a wedding, then there's nothing else that can."

Another "Auto" Suggestion
"Why are you always hurrying so?" "Dunno; maybe my rubber heels are made from the tire of some speed wagon."

De Bergerac Real Person
Savilier Cyrus de Bergerac was a French author who was born in 1810 and who died in 1906. Edmund Rosland wrote a drama in which De Bergerac was the hero, and the play was in many ways true to facts. The real De Bergerac was distinguished for his courage in the field and for the duels he fought. These numbered more than a thousand, most of them fought on account of his monstrously large nose.

KEEPING WELL

STAMMERING AND STUTTERING
DR. FREDERICK A. GREEN
Editor of "MELT"

EVERY schoolboy knows the story of Demosthenes. As a boy he stammered. He could not pronounce the letter "R." So he put pebbles in his mouth and practiced speaking on the seashore until he became, in time, the greatest orator in Athens.

Stammering and stuttering are probably as old as human speech. The boy who stutters today has just as much trouble with his "R" as Demosthenes had three thousand years ago. He can overcome his trouble as Demosthenes did, if he will work as hard to train his tongue and his lips.

Some impediments of speech are due to physical defects, such as tongue-tie, hare-lip, cleft palate and others. But there is nothing wrong with the vocal machinery of the child who stutters. His machine is all right, but he can't control it.

Any person, when surprised, confused or shocked by some unexpected occurrence, will stammer. Why? Because he is confused. His mind is not working clearly, and his brain is sending contrary orders to his tongue and his lips. That is the condition of a stutterer. Every fright, embarrassment or habit, his talking muscles, when he tries to use them, are seized by a spasm, and produce a series of senseless, confused sounds instead of clear, definite speech. This is generally due to lack of confidence and self-control so that the cause of stuttering is really the mental condition of the child. The principal reason why a child stutters is because he is afraid he will stutter.

Punishment by parents or teachers or ridicule by playmates only increases this fear. The child ceases to talk, except when compelled to. Other people avoid talking to him, until talking, instead of a natural, unconscious habit, becomes an agony of effort.

Stammering is a temporary inability to speak. Stuttering is the repetition in rapid succession of the same syllable or word. In one case he can't get started; in the other he starts but can't go on.

In either case, the child's speech mechanism is defective, not in construction but in action. He must be taught slowly, gently, kindly and patiently how to run his speech machine smoothly, evenly and without effort.

Stutterers must learn to take time to consider what they are going to say before they speak. Most children with speech defects are impulsive. They must learn self-control. They must learn to speak slowly, distinctly and regularly. They should practice reading aloud every day. They should practice the vowels, just as a singer practices his scales. Then short combinations of letters should be practiced, at first slowly and the speed rapidly increased.

Stutterers should be developed physically by sleep, good food, outdoor play and exercise, for anything which makes the child stronger and more confident helps to do away with the fear which is the cause of the affliction.

I'VE BEEN WONDERING

About bread. To most people bread is just bread unless it's rye bread, in which case it's Italian.

But nowadays when everything has a trade mark and a nick name and a pedigree, bread has naturally stepped into line with the rest.

And down at the Cedarville Bakery, where really good bread is made, they have a whole bread family, about seven different kinds, and each one is the leader in its line, so you can see they're in first place on the question of quality.

First they've got corn meal bread, like mother used to make, an enormous tasty loaf without a wrapper, but with a coupon that gives a loaf free when you collect twelve of them. A baker's dozen.

And then there's the Harvest Twin, a big double loaf, custom built for the huge eaters. It is also popular in town.

And then Potato Bread, the large single loaf that slices thin and tasty for the Monday meal and has a lollypop thrown in like butter color for flavoring your appetite.

I must mention two more that have real food value. Health or Whole Wheat Bread, a tooth preserver, and Milk Bread, with the creamy taste. Your doctor's advice for health and happiness.

I almost forgot the old standby, Cinnamon Bread, the flower of the flour. The hot-house variety you can get all the year 'round. Always the same and always a little better.

And once a week, on Wednesdays, they fix up a Salt-Rising loaf that goes good with buttermilk or anything else for that matter.

That's quite a list. Especially when they're all home town products and you can get any of them right at your favorite grocery. Of course if you prefer you can come over to the home ovens and get them at the Bakery, and if you can't find something there to suit you there's not much hope for you unless you are real old fashioned and prefer biscuits or cornbread and syrup.
